Obituary

NORMAN JAMES

The Mirror-Reporter extends sincere sympathy to Editor M. A. James, of the Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville, and others so sorely bereaved by the death of his son, Mr. Norman S. B. James, superintendent and business manager of the Statesman, which sad event took place at the Hospital on June 20, after twelve days' illness with erysipelas. He was in his 47th year, and was highly esteemed by a host of friends. For 5 years he has been Pres. of the Hospital Board, and he was instrumental in having a nurses' residence erected. He was a member of the United Church, the Rotary and Canadian Clubs, Chamber of Commerce and other organizations. He was a Mason, a Canadian Forester and an Independent Oddfellow. The funeral under the direction of the Oddfellows was very largely attended. Hundreds of floral offerings were silent testimonies to the love and esteem his fellow men and women had for him. Everyone was treated courteously by him, whether rich or poor, high or low, and his sunny smile and helping hand will be missed. Our sympathy again, especially to his aged father, his wife and family.

MRS. TOLBERT

The death occurred on Sunday morning of Myrle Fallis, beloved wife of John Tolbert of Toronto, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fallis, Bethany. The funeral, to Fallis' Cemetery, on Monday, was largely attended. Rev. A. Poulter conducted the impressive services. The large number of floral offerings were silent tributes to one who was greatly loved by a host of friends. Her husband, parents, five sisters and two brothers are left to mourn the loss of a devoted wife, daughter and sister. Those bereaved have the sincere sympathy of the whole community.

HERBERT MULLEN

The many friends of Mr. Herbert Mullen were shocked to hear of his sudden death on Wednesday, June 26th, at the home of his cousin, Mrs. Alfred Ward, 261 Romaine st., Peterboro, where he has made his home for nine years. He was employed with the De Laval Co. He worked till the night before his death. Deceased was a true christian gentleman, and he was always ready to help anyone in need. He was a faithful member of L.

O. L. No. 1175, Peterboro, and was the Worshipful Master at the time of his death.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving brother is his only sister, Mrs. Matthew Fallis, of Cavan.

Deceased was 57 years of age. He resided 20 years in Michigan before going to Peterboro. The funeral on Saturday, to the Presbyterian Cemetery, Millbrook, was very largely attended. Rev. M. McDonald, of Knox Church, Peterboro, conducted the services.

The funeral was under direction of L.O.L. 1175.

Among the beautiful floral tributes were: wreath from De Laval, wreath from L. O. L. 1175, spray from Mr. and Mrs. Walter Burns, wreath from Mr. and Mrs. Matt Fallis, spray from Mrs. Campbell, spray from nieces, Mrs. Leslie Bristow and Mrs. S. Powers.

To those bereaved the Mirror-Reporter joins in extending sincere sympathy.

Presentation

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dawson, of the 7th Line, Cavan, after having had tea at the home of his brother, Mr. Bruce Dawson, Millbrook, on Tuesday, returned home to find their home in possession of about 100 friends and neighbors, who had met to honor them on the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson welcomed the invaders, and hoped they would enjoy themselves, and they lost no time in doing so. Mr. I. W. Larmer was the happy chairman. He asked Mr. Jas. Roddy to read the address, which contained many eulogistic remarks in reference to the "bride and groom." They were presented with two wicker chairs, a wicker tennery and three ferns; an oak service tray and 12 cut glass tumblers; a cut glass sandwich dish with handle; 6 silver desert spoons Cromwell pattern. Audrey, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewers, presented to Mrs. Dawson a sheaf of orchids. Mr. Dawson gratefully acknowledged the kindness to his wife and himself. You simply overwhelm us with such kindly words and lovely gifts, was the upmost thought of Mr. and Mrs. Dawson. All surrounded the happy couple and sang "For they are jolly good fellows." Addresses were delivered by Messrs. James Roddy, F. Lewers, W. Moncrief, O. Pue and I. W. Larmer. The Byam Orchestra, assisted by Mr. K. Skitch supplied good music. Recitations were given by Misses Ruby Cunningham and Audrey Larmer. Sur-ner was served by a committee, the self-invited guests having brought an abundance of "eats", including a large wedding cake, in which the bride made the first cut. Games, music and dancing were indulged in for an hour or so before the happy gathering dispersed. All wished Mr. and Mrs. Dawson many more years of happiness and prosperity.

Four hundred thousand babies have been born at Banff during the past fortnight. It is not the fine mountain air that accounts for this phenomenon, but the mountain water, and the babies are rainbow trout from the Dominion Government Fish hatchery on the banks of the Bow River. They will be placed in the lakes and streams of the Rocky Mountain Parks.

Canadian Pacific Railway Police, Ontario No. 1 team, are champion revolver shots of the Dominion. After winning the Chief Constables Association Trophy in May, the team shot against the Lethbridge detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police which had won the championship for Military forces, and defeated them 1412 against 1370. Possible score was 1500. The victorious team is composed of Investigator E. O'Brien, Sudbury; and Constables H. H. Gyves, Fort McNicoll; J. H. B. MacDonald, Toronto; D. Prendergast, Sudbury; and W. E. Flanagan, White River, Ont.

With a population that ranks 25th among the countries of the world, Canada is fifth in total exports and third in total turnover of trade.

Charles Olson and Raffaele Matullari, rival round-the-world racers, are trying to make a trip circling the globe in less than 30 days using only "regular means of transportation." Olson left Victoria on Canadian Pacific's Greyhound Empress of Asia June 13, and Matullari arrived at Vancouver on the Empress of France June 22. Airplanes come within the terms of the contract since both men have already used them. The race at time of writing is very close.

A problem that has defeated the learned for centuries--the squaring of the circle--has apparently been solved by L. W. Hartman, Canadian Pacific Railway timekeeper at London, Ont. Hartman claims he devised a geometric method by which to reproduce the exact area of a circle in the shape of a square. University professors are now examining his solution. He was born in Rumania and never saw a college, but speaks English, French, German and Rumanian fluently.

Adelard Goulet, head barber of the Banff Springs Hotel, had what he regards as a close shave the other day when he was off duty on the golf links and met a black bear. He topped his drive and the bear beat a hasty retreat. Wild animals are very tame in this district this year.

Of the 2,750,000 acres taken up by settlers in Canada in 1928 eighty per cent was in such northerly districts as Prince Rupert, Saskatchewan, and the Peace River district, Alberta. The migration northward was most pronounced in the Peace River region, where 4,000 homesteads were taken up last year. In this district, there are still available 40,000,000 acres of fertile land, capable of adding millions of dollars to the annual value of the Dominion's crops.

Bethany Leads League

Bethany defeated the Crescents by a score of 5 to 3, which placed them in first place in the East Peterboro League series. It was a real game. Ryley made a homer by driving the ball nearly 40 feet beyond the fence. It was a pretty one and a record for distance. It looks like Bethany's season to win. They certainly are putting up some classy ball playing.

Lady Eaton and Children Entertain at "Villa Fiori"

Over Seven Hundred Guests Are Received at Garden Party Held Among Quaint Rural Surroundings—Dancers, Music, Sideshow Transforms Grounds Into a Playground.

A pink house with trimmings of blue and pale blue jardinières filled with flowering plants on the verandas. Sloping lawns stretching away to a little lake in front, or to a picturesque rose garden against a protecting background of evergreens.

This is "Villa Fiori" a little bit of Italy, with its delightful flare for color, set in the midst of rural Ontario.

Add a pile of modern barns and 700 acres of farmland and you have Eaton Hall Farm, the beautiful country residence of Lady Eaton.

There yesterday afternoon she received over 700 guests at a garden party, given close upon her return from Europe the day before.

At four o'clock the cars filled with guests began to arrive and the Dufferin highway, close to King, Ont., immediately assumed the aspect of a busy day in Toronto.

The approach to the "Villa Fiori" is through half a mile or more of virgin maple woods. But in spite of the floating Union Jack, to attract attention where the open driveway branches off into the bush, many of the arriving guests played a joke on themselves, and drove zaily on, to chase their own exhaust about the stables, until they found themselves.

Just as unexpectedly as the road disappeared into the bush, it emerged again, disclosing the gay panorama of the "Villa Fiori" and the garden party in progress.

The lawns were dotted with guests in colorful gowns which floated in a cascade of draperies beneath coats which threatening rain and a stiff wind had forced into service.

Muge parasols, in gay tones, offered resting places here and there. Hundreds of pink, blue and green toy balloons floated about on strings, clutched in the hands of small guests. For it was a family affair and the invitations read "and family."

In a marquee erected near the entrance to the villa, Lady Eaton received with her three sons—Timothy, John David and Edgar, all of whom towered above her. Her costume was of pale lettuce green with matching green telt hat, jewelry of the same tone, a smart black moire coat and flame colored shoes.

Timothy is farming in England, John David is at Cambridge, and Edgar goes to France in the fall to study languages.

For two hours they received a constant stream of guests, among whom were Mrs. R. Y. Eaton, Mrs. G. Howard Ferguson, his worship, the Mayor and Mrs. McBride. The guests included many of the musical, literary and artist folk of Toronto.

Early in the afternoon little Evelyn Eaton, Lady Eaton's youngest daughter, grew up before the "Villa Fiori" in a smart pony cart. The pony, Kitchener, bears the distinction of having taught all the Eaton boys to ride.

Little Miss Eaton was smartly rocked in the same pale green shade as her mother, but wore a quaint white flannel coat and drooping straw hat with touches of green.

It was not long before she was off across the lawn and down to the lake where rowboats awaited the pleasure of the guests.

In she hopped and it was from a vantage point several yards off in the lake that she watched the Eaton Girls' Club dancers as they entertained the guests in picturesque numbers on the green.

Doctor's orders kept her little ten-year-old sister indoors. But she had plenty of fun watching the garden party from her bedroom window in the villa.

Here, in a great chaise longue, wrapped warmly in a comforter, she held a little court all by herself, for numbers of the guests made a special trip upstairs to talk to little Florence Mary Eaton who was born on the 15th day of Nov'r, the day when Santa Claus first arrived in Toronto under Eaton escort. She, too, wore pale green like her mother.

In a marquee down by the lake, the 48th Highlanders furnished music for the dancers. A hollow not far away had been transformed into a playground. Here a Punch and Judy show was in progress. There were teters, swings and slides, all to please the child guests, who rolled about and shrieked with delight.

Up near the house a third marquee communicated with the reception marquee by a covered corridor. It was from this shelter that refreshments were served, while an orchestra on the veranda presented a delightful musical program.

With reluctance the guests finally drove away. But the last thing they saw as they passed through the lodge gates was the printed invitation—a touch of courtesy from the old world:

"Visitors are welcome, except on Sundays."

Gifts To Lacrosse Club

The Millbrook Lacrosse Club, only recently organized, are already away to a good start towards success. Not only have the Junior boys won their first game but they are now fairly well equipped, thanks to their many and generous friends.

Especially do the town and Club wish to thank Mr. Alf Gault, of Toronto, for his most generous donation of a dozen lacrosse sticks of fine quality and also a set of goal nets. Mr. Gault is an old Millbrook Lacrosse player and apparently is still in love with the game. He has won a place of high esteem among the lacrosse players here by his generosity.

We also are very grateful to ex-Councillor T. J. Lang for his donation of iron for the nets and to the many kind friends in Millbrook and surrounding district who bought shares from the boys when the Club was first organized. Over thirty dollars was raised in this way enabling the boys to purchase their first two dozen sticks.

A fee of fifty cents is charged to become a member of the Club, upon payment of which member is entitled to the use of one stick, subject to the rules of the Club. All equipment including sticks is the property of the Club.

As soon as the boys are in a position to purchase lacrosse sweaters they will be ready to camp, to with their neighbouring rivals and we hope bring honour to themselves and the villa.

Alden Takot Drake is contemptuous of the idle life he is leading in his luxurious home. The urge which took him to sea on leaving school has never left him. One night he slips away from a party at his house and makes his way to Salortown, ancient rendezvous of men who follow the sea, where he meets up with little Joe Bunting, a sailor. They drink each other off their feet in a barroom, and Drake is carried upstairs, presumably to be shanghaied next morning aboard the Orontes. Drake hears himself denounced by Captain Stevens of the Orontes as being not even fit for shanghaiing. Drake mutters: "This is too much of a good thing"—and marches through the door of the room in which he was thrown the night before. At the threshold he stops, however, upon hearing a woman's voice.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

In the passage three people walked slowly by, two men, and a girl. "So it's as well you were delayed over the men," a deep, muzzling, unstrange voice was saying. "I shouldn't have brought Mary into a den like this; but time is short, and you must sail today."

"Oh, please don't worry about me," answered the girl's voice. "It's fun. I wanted to see—Oh, look!" the voice dropped to a stage whisper. "There's a man in there!" Drake grinned silently. He wanted to take a square look at the owner of that voice. It was a rich, liquid, happy voice. It sent a queer ripple along his throat. But he dared not take his arms from his face. He knew, by the next voice, that they had passed on. "All the men are aboard but one, Captain Manning." This was Stevens speaking. "I'll have a man in half get through. Time's short," cut in Captain Manning.

"The crimp," said Stevens. "I would feel like a hand beater if I hit that double left handed thing in silk striped pants that—"

"Yes, yes," said the captain impatiently. "Never mind the dude. You get your ship warped out to the pier-head whether you have a full complement or not. You'll lose the rest if you don't." The trio were right at the door. rafe simply had to peep. "I have done all that's needed in change of masters. You'll take the Orontes out to atavia. Take good care of Mary, and see her safely to her brother's place. I'll get the business that's keeping me ashore all settled by the time you get back. Then we'll talk about what's to be done."

Drake's first peep showed him the thick gray bearded, copper-bronzed old gentleman of nautical aspect whose fat chaise horses he had started with his clanging gate. His next was more than a peep, for he raised his head, and looked straight into the wide blue eyes of the girl who had handled those frightened horses. He shuddered.

He wanted, as he had wanted no other thing in life, to show that clean, self-possessed young lady that he belonged of a clean race, too. He wanted to tell her something. He could still hear her voice. He could hear the deep rumbling tones of her father, if Captain Manning were her parent; hear too the blatant, confident roar of Stevens. He hated Stevens more than ever. Stevens apparently was the sail-master of the Orontes clipper; with Mary Manning as passenger. Stevens, a brute, a manhandler who for these dogs and pumps, and well make the deal," he said. "I want the odd half crown cash."

Rearranged in blue dungerees, shod with wooden pegged shoes, still minus a cap. Danke almost ran until he found a telegraph office. There he spent fifteen precious minutes coding a message to his lawyer. After which he ran in good earnest through the Dock-gates, for he had seen the long jibboom with the snowy furlled jibs, slowly creep out of sight above the dock wall.

The Orontes was moving out to the locks. Drake mingled with the gang shifting her lines as she warped along. He handed wet, heavy hawlines enthusiastically. But Lord! how soft he had grown! How his arms ached. How his breath caught.

Drake recalled all his earlier knowledge of a ship's arrangement. He had no fear about being seen for a brief while, where all men were strangers. He knew there was only one man aboard who would be likely to know the mate he had shipped, and that man, recently the mate, was now walking the poop, master. A whistle shrilled out aft. The mate ran to the forecastle rail to answer; and Drake ducked and ran into the forecastle itself. Some steel ships, he knew, had a steel bowsprit which entered the forecastle through the bows, and was hollow to the big wide head. The Orontes had. He wriggled into the convenient cavity like an eel, and lay there palpitating jubilantly.

Overhead the dreary gang tramped the capstan around.

CHAPTER V.

MAC'S FANCY BLOKE.

Crouched in his narrow steel shell, Drake thrilled to the adventure he had hurled himself into.

He inhaled a deep breath for the confines of his steel shell grew stuffy. Dry red lead dust tickled his throat and nostrils. He sneezed. Thanked the stars there was nobody to hear. He started to sneeze again, and fought desperately to stop the explosion; for voices sounded appallingly near. At the forecastle door.

"Won't be fit for a lady to look into one those hogs get settled down here," Captain Stevens was saying. "I am rater proud of this ship's forecastle. It's the driest, roumiest, lightest forecastle I ever saw in a sailing ship. Wonder you never saw it before." "Oh, Daddy never let me come forward," laughed Mary Manning. "It is a nice big place, isn't it? How many men live here? O-oh!"

Usefulness

In youth you must lay in a stock of knowledge which may carry you through life, whatever your after pursuits may be, with usefulness and honor. But recollect, this is not to be done without exertion, without the frequent sacrifice of momentary pleasure and gratification. Self-denial is a virtue of the highest quality, and he who has it not, and does not strive to acquire it, will never excel in anything. Conybear.

Western Hills

During my months in Peking, of the many things I enjoyed those that stand in my memory for delight are excursions outside the city. I had been prepared by photographs for the beauty of the Great Wall, but it was exciting beyond expectation. Besides the power that belongs to all great walls, the sense of fortitude and stability, there is an impression of active energy, as though soldiers were hardy needed to defend it, and its many watch-towers were to rise into use only. It is an inspiration to stand on a Tower and see the Wall travelling determinedly as far as the eye can reach in either direction, up hill and down dale, discovering even in the valleys ridges on which to perch itself, a breathless impetus carrying it to the top of the highest hills.

Puffing up the pass by train the Wall had impressed me merely as a magnificent enclosure. The first hint of its liveliness was at the station where we stopped. Here it fled from the mechanical monster which had cut it through, a headlong flight up precipitous hillsides leaving its stairway wrecked behind it. We joined it by a gentler slope, and found it broad as a lane and generally in wonderful preservation.

My visit was in July and the hills, obviously never very green, were completely bare. In the crannies of the Wall there were hints of what wild flowers there might be, strange varieties generally of things well known at home; salvia, campanula, morning glory, etc. There were also Mongolian lings in wait for the innocent sightseers, with stalls of lemonade and other refreshments.

My last trip in the Western Hills was in late October, to the great pilgrimage temple of Ming Tsung Shan—the Mountain of the Marvellous Peak. To go there we followed the Pilgrims' Way. This, while not much more than a path in width, is one of the very few made roads in North China, paved in its length. In the first stage my vivid recollection is of perimonton orchards. The trees, far larger and more bushy than any to be seen in an English orchard, were laden with large golden fruit, brilliant as oranges among sparsely crimson leaves—the sight of the orchards alone would have been well worth the Journey. The stage ended at the house of our host, Lo Ching Shan Chai, so christened by the late Emperor. In English the name sounds elaborate, though it is certainly appropriate, the Nature Lover's Mountain Lodge. It was situated in Ming Tao Kow, Cherry Glen by interpretation, the leaves, autumn-tinted, still made the foreground brilliant as it fell rapidly from us.

Below a mountain in stream rushed, tearing its way between trees and boulders, with here and there a smooth sheet of water. . . . The view from the dwelling house itself was broad, enclosed by fine outlines of ordered hills, blue and purple at sunset against a primrose sky. Half a mile up a steep gien on the other side of the stream the temple of our host was dedicated "To all great men who loved nature." The tablets of Keats, Shelley, Walt Whitman and Shakespeare, among English-speaking nature-lovers, and many another great one from every nation, were there in company with two fine old Buddhas who, when the village temple was overtaken by destruction, had found a refuge here—Rachel Wheatcroft, in "Siam and Cambodia in Pen and Pastel."

Being and Thinking

Character is higher than intellect. Thinking is the function; living is the functionary. The stream retreats to its source. A great soul will be strong to live as well as to think. Living is a total act; thinking is a partial act. Let the grandeur of justice shine in his affairs. Let the beauty of affection cheer his lowly roof. The scholar loses no hour that the man lives. Some Rules to Follow In Feeding the Pre-School Child

Rules for Eating

1. Children should wash their hands before eating.
2. Food should be eaten slowly and chewed thoroughly.
3. Include some fresh vegetables in each day's menu.
4. Give each child at least a pint of milk a day.
5. Water should be given freely between meals, but not at bed time.
6. A glass of milk and a piece of bread or some fruit is all that should be given to a well child between meals and then only if he is really hungry.

Cooking Food

Cereals—Coarse cereals require at least three hours' cooking in a double boiler, fine cereals at least one hour. Cereals are largely composed of starch and fibre. Long cooking is necessary to soften the fibre and thoroughly cook the starch. In a fine cereal, heat penetrates more quickly to the centre of each grain than in a coarse cereal—hence the necessity of longer cooking of coarse cereals.

Vegetables—All vegetables need to be thoroughly cooked. Steaming is the best method of cooking vegetables, because there is not as great a loss of food material, particularly the valuable mineral salts. If vegetables are cooked by boiling, however, the water in which they are cooked (stock) should be kept, and used when making soup or vegetable sauce. Potatoes are best baked, or boiled with the skins on and peeled afterwards.

Eggs—Should be soft cooked, coddled, poached or scrambled, not fried.

Meats—Should be roasted, boiled or broiled. Fried meats should not be given to children. Most stews made with potatoes and other vegetables are recommended, provided they are thoroughly cooked and the fat has been removed.

Soups—Clear soups have practically no food value, but soups made from meat, to which vegetables and barley, rice or macaroni are added, make valuable food. Thick soups, especially those made from peas and beans with the addition of milk, are nutritious and cheap and may largely be substituted for meat and eggs.

Serving Food

Food should be served warm and well cooked, on clean plates and on a clean table. Food that is "off flavor" or tainted should never be served.

Milk should be kept cool—if possible on ice.

Fishes should be kept away from food.

Symbols In Rugs

Montreal—Interpretations of drawings on Oriental carpets were exemplified by D. W. Thomas, president of St. David's Society, in an address on "The Influence of the Orient over American and European Countries." Various and important contributions of the Orient to other nations of the world and a short history of the Orient opened the speaker's remarks. In early days, Oriental rugs were not marketed. They were given to relatives or friends as tokens of remembrance or friendship. But to-day, the Orient, like all other countries, has commercialized all its products and its arts. Nevertheless, the same art as that of preceding centuries still prevails in all exported carpets.

To the majority of possessors of Oriental rugs, the speaker stated, the designs are without meaning. But such is not always the case for every design such as the eight pointed star, the sun, the flowers, the four cardinal points and the bird, is the symbol of an actual thing. Imitation of the style existing in Persia erected in Persia has also prevailed throughout the centuries.

These carpets are found chiefly in Persia. There is a notable difference between the style of Northern Persia and that of Southern Persia. The latter differs from the first in the abundance of curves rather than the geometrical and symmetrical forms of Northern Persia. Various examples of these differences were illustrated by the speaker.

Unbalanced Memory

It is so easy to forget a kindness, and to remember a kick. Yet controlling our recollections is almost as important as controlling our temper. We are apt to forget completely a hundred little kindnesses and courtesies which one has shown us, and to remember a single careless slight or thoughtless word. Often we hear it said of some wrong or foolish deed, "I have never thought so well of that man since then; it was there he showed his real character."—as if a man's real character appeared more in one separate deed to which, perhaps, he was sorely tempted, than in the striving and overcoming of many days and years.

an hour. The crimp tried to send me a putty dude." The fellow laughed discordantly. Evidently playing to the girl, thought Drake. "If you saw it, Miss Mary, you'd want it for a dolly, but you'd have to wash it first."

"Are you speaking about a man?" came the girl's voice, cool and unappreciative. Drake never could decide, even years later, whether the girl meant that to be frosty, or was having fun with Stevens too deep for his understanding. Now they were coming past the door again.

"Tried to dump the dude onto me, sir. I hammered him well."

"Who, the dude?" queried the girl, sharply.

"Hush, child! Let Mister Stevens set himself up a judge of a man's value as a man.

"He says I'm not even worth shanghaiing! Caesar! I'd like to argue that with him!"

But how? Drake took steps to peep outside again. If he could just catch Mister Stevens alone for a moment, with that girl out of the way, he would see. The big blond beast might batter a clumsy customer like the crimp, slow moving, slow thinking, a creature of one idea. But Drake had known the day when he could handle himself above a bit. He had licked the half-deck bully on his first voyage to sea. There was nothing like confidence.

"So you'll get on board, Captain Stevens, and haul out to the pierhead before your crew jump," the old gentleman was saying. "Mary, my girl, take care of yourself. Have a good holiday with Jack, and he'll bring you home when he comes. I'll write you at Cape Town."

Drake followed stealthily. His hopes were dashed, for the three left the place together and walked towards the Docks. He stood on the sun-bathed pavement, staring after them.

Then he hurried down the quieter side street. The sight of three gilded balls over a grimy window full of knives, pistols, sextants, ship models, and curios from all the Seven Seas rounded out a resolve which set his pulse bounding again. He slipped inside.

"How much, Uncle?" he demanded, producing his gold fob watch.

"Where'd y' pinch it?" returned Uncle, a jeweler's glass in one sharp eye alongside a battleship's ram of a beak.

"Don't be funny! How much?"

"It got a name in it. 'Tain't vort' much. Git y' aarf quid fob an' all."

"How much can I buy a suit of dungerees and a shirt for?"

"T'ree arf crowns."

Drake mentally calculated. He had to send a telegram.

"Give me a good pair of stout shoes

What Labour Says In Victory Hour

Its Press and Politicians Are Naturally in a Jubilant Mood

"If I can prevent it there will be no disturbance of the country by an election within two years."

"I am so much concerned for the quiet development of industry, the peaceful mind, and confidence both at home and abroad, that I will use every ounce of influence I have to prevent an election during that period."

"I think this Parliament ought to last even longer."

"That statement must not be taken by either of the other two parties to mean that we are going to submit to any unfairness."

"I wish to make it quite clear that I am going to stand no 'monkeying.' It will rest with the other two parties and not with us, whether there is to be an election sooner than in two years."

"That is the only thing one can say just now. I have seen the troubles and upsets to industry, finance, and internal developments of unnecessary elections."

"Whatever Government is going to make itself responsible for the conduct of national affairs both at home and abroad at this time ought to have a chance to develop its policy."

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald.

"The workers of Britain have pronounced their verdict on the Baldwin Government. Before the swift advancing tide of democratic indignation the mighty Tory majority built up on the Red Letter Day of 1924 has been smashed to atoms," says the Daily Herald.

"Mr. Baldwin spoke 'stomps' of peace and goodwill, but in action his heel was always at work. Wherever that hard heel rested the people have risen in their might and rejected his representations with overwhelming scorn and derision. The humiliating Tory polls in the mining area are but a measure of the contumely, mistrust and scorn he has aroused."

The Workers Have Given Their Answer.

"Lord Birkenhead and Mr. Churchill went about the country telling of what condign punishment would be meted out to the Labour Party because of its declaration that it would render null and void the foul provisions of the Trade Disputes Act. The workers have given their answer. Throughout the country the trusted leaders of Tory Unionism have been elected to mark the people's resentment of this mean Tory attempt to cripple their industrial and political machinery."

"But not only have these triumphs been secured in districts which are traditionally Labour in their sympathies, they have been achieved in the very heart of Toryism."

"By deciding to resist at once," says the Yorkshire Post, "Mr. Baldwin relieves Mr. MacDonald of some measure of uncertainty and anxiety. He can proceed at once to the formation of his Cabinet and to the preparation of whatever programme he thinks can be successfully presented to Parliament."

Liberal 'Friendly Neutrality'

"His task will be too easy in any case, for while he may well eschew any such programme as may look too like an open bid for Liberal support, or at least for Liberal 'friendly neutrality,' he is bound, presumably, to seek to offer legislation of a character to make Liberal opposition difficult."

"Moreover, he has to consider, as events are likely to show in the future, the kind of promises which have been made in the constituencies, if not in his published programme, at least by his propagandist lieutenants. He will certainly be glad to be relieved of any additional uncertainties arising from the tactical position."

"If Mr. MacDonald tries honestly to serve the interests of the country in the difficult position in which he finds himself, it may be anticipated that he will not meet with factious opposition intended simply to make 'scoring points.'"

"In all the circumstances," points out the Birmingham Post, "the sooner Labour can get to work the better. Since in the near future Mr. MacDonald is again to enjoy the dignity we shall not say the sweets-of office, it is but right he should have an opportunity to form a Ministry and prepare a programme before Parliament assembles."

"His troubles will then begin, for he has a motley company to control, to say nothing of a reputation for squeezability which his Left-Wingers are unlikely to forget; and he will remain—as he was four and a half years ago—at the mercy of the Liberal Party, which can swallow a great deal, but must not be accused of any special sympathy for the aims of the anti-out-and-class-war socialists in a hurry."

"He is not going to socialize the Bank of England just yet awhile, or even the mines; and it is so certain he is not going to satisfy a number more expectations his friends have aroused that it would not be by any means surprising to see him, ere long, deliberately riding for a fall."

"The verdict is a clear and unmistakable notice to quit so far as the Government is concerned. It is clearly a mandate for Labour."

"No one would attempt to minimise the difficulties. They are many. But our Movement and our people have grown on difficulties, and now on the dawn of a Labour Government must be unmindful of the millions of men and women who have striven and worked for our return. They must not and will not be let down."

"Equally it is important to remember the colossal task in front of us. All these things will be faced boldly and with a single-minded desire to make our country better than it is today. That is the spirit in which the situation will be faced."

Mr. Glynnes, M.P.

"We have not had in recent history any instance where an anti-Government vote has been so decisive. The Government had no constructive plan or policy on unemployment or social questions. Labour won because of its programme upon these problems; and it has now a constitutional right to the Parliamentary opportunity for which the electors made it the strongest party in the House of Commons."

Mr. Snowden, M.P.

"The election results have exceeded my expectations. The Labour Party has won seats where victory seemed impossible."

"We have won the whole of the industrial areas, and by substantial majorities."

"A Labour Government is assured. There is no alternative."

MacDonald Flies Back to London

Premier Makes Fast Trip from Scottish Home in Army Plane

Hendon, England—Premier MacDonald arrived at Hendon airmore just outside of London at 4 o'clock, returning from his vacation at Lossiemouth, Scotland, to take up his official duties as head of the new Labour Government. He made the entire trip from Lossiemouth by airplane, with a stop at Catterick Camp, Yorkshire, for luncheon.

AT CATTERICK CAMP

Catterick Camp, Yorkshire, Eng.—Premier Ramsay MacDonald arrived here by airplane today from his Lossiemouth, Scotland, home at 12:25 p.m. on his way to take up official duties in London. He lunched at the officers' mess and left by airplane at 2:30 p.m. He said he had a thoroughly enjoyable trip.

LEAVES SCOTTISH HOME

Lossiemouth, Scotland.—Prime Minister MacDonald completed his holiday here this morning and left aboard a military airplane for his London desk.

The Premier found a large crowd awaiting him at the taking off field where the bomber in which he was to fly and the small scout machine to act as escort previously had landed.

He, his daughter Isobel and his secretary mixed for a few minutes with a delegation of children from the school he once attended as a boy. Then he donned his new flying coat, helmet and goggles.

Miss Isobel helped to strap a parachute to her father's back and he bade her goodbye, entering the plane. The pilot, D. Hislop expressed pleasure at having so distinguished a passenger and said the weather conditions high up were smooth and he expected to make a good trip.

The Premier's daughter was unable to accompany him by airplane because of a British army regulation forbidding women to make flights in military places.

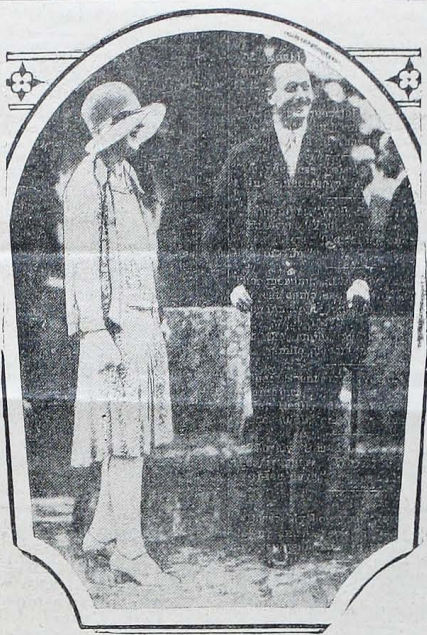

Fires Drive Indians On to Lake Islands

Three Areas Burning in Nelson House District, North of Winnipeg

Winnipeg, June 14.—(C.P.)—With forest fires raging around their encampments, Indians living north of Nelson House, Manitoba, have been forced to seek shelter on small islands in Beaverdam Lake, according to word reaching here late to-night. Several Indian families have taken protection on the islands.

Three large fires are burning up in the Nelson House district which is about 150 miles due north of Winnipeg.

The settlement at Nelson House is not at present endangered, but development of high wind would prove a great menace to the mission and trading post located there.

Byng Improves London Police

Former Governor-General of Canada Succeeds in Clean-up

London—Viscount Byng, appointed Commissioner of the London Metropolitan Police last year to reform police methods, has issued his annual report which shows police offenses actually upon a smaller scale in the last 12 months than for the previous year.

Punishment for neglect of duty was meted out in only 455 cases, compared with 580 in 1927 and 622 in 1928. How high the standard of efficiency has been is shown by the fact that last year not a single murderer—of whom there were only 24 in the London metropolitan area, comprising 7,750,000 people—escaped detection.

CONFIDENCE SHAKEN

Referring to the effect on the London police of the public criticism to which they have been subjected, Lord Byng says: "There is good reason to believe that the constable's confidence in the public and in himself was for a time slightly shaken and that the efficiency of the force suffered in consequence."

Taking into consideration the number of police officers involved and the large variety of circumstances which arise I am impressed by the rarity of cases in which frivolous or malicious charges have been brought by the police."

Lord Byng also deals with the current supposition that unnecessary prosecutions are liable to be encouraged by the promotion system in operation in the metropolitan police.

POINTS OF FALLACY

"It is often suggested," he said, "that an officer's prospects of promotion depend upon the number of charges he initiates. This is a fallacy. Officers are selected for promotion on general considerations of their character, ability and attention to duty, which cannot be guarded by any such arbitrary standard."

Turning to some offences that the police are concerned with preventing he says: "Proceedings for drunkenness showed a substantial decrease, the total figures of 26,057 being 4066 less than for 1927 and 6953 less than for 1928."

Says Big Meteor Made Lake Boil

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.—A strange tale was brought down to the Soo from Michipicoten Island by Frank Kuschick, a prospector, who said a huge meteor about the size of a ship fell into Lake Superior close to the island at 10 o'clock on the night of June 11. The meteor illuminated the island with the brilliancy of daylight and created a rumbling noise which was heard for two minutes after the meteor fell at Puckasaw and Pipe River, 20 and 12 miles away respectively.

Kuschick's story is supported by his brother, Gordon, and Augusta Weidman, camped about two miles away on the island. The meteor fell between the island and the mainland and there appeared to be two balls of fire, either following the meteor closely or attached to it. The air was full of sparks, the two said. Quite a sea arose after the meteor struck the water and there was a rumbling noise believed to have been caused by boiling water. The level of the lake arose appreciably.

Beats Doctor to Operation

Chicago—"What you need," said Dr. F. Siegfried Jackson, examining a transient patient at his office recently, "is to have your tonsils taken out. I'll operate to-morrow."

"And I," said the patient, swinging a pistol, "will operate now."

It is said that in Chicago to-day there is a man with $210 of Dr. Jackson's money and a pair of tonsils that need taking out.

The Saskatchewan Result

Prince Albert Patriote de l'Ouest (Ind.):—"We have fought the Provincial Conservatives because there have always existed among them influential people who were ready to attack us and to give us great reason; be anxious about these very few rights of ours whose maintenance we demand, if they were returned to power. But we should not forget, on the other hand, that it is the Conservatives who have been our best friends in Manitoba, and that in Ontario it was Mr. Ferguson who abolished Regulation XVII. Maybe, now that they have come to power, the Conservatives will follow these good examples. We will judge the new Government by its acts, being resolved at all times to stand for our rights. And if experience shows that our fears have been ill-founded, we will consider it our duty to give the complete liberty of action as far as voting goes. Among them there are many Conservatives who would gladly vote for a party which has always been theirs."

Gambling On the Stock Exchange

Quebec Soleil (Lib.): "The disaster which the majority of those who have tried their luck on the stock market have suffered, utterly lamentable and cruel as they are, are as nothing compared with the economic repudiation which they are likely to cause. These disasters could have been repaired in time—but in a much longer time with the French-Canadians than with the English speaking Canadians we have not the same recuperative power—if the money had merely changed hands. But unfortunately this is not the case. The money, or at least the greater part of it, has gone out of the country. It has gone to the Stock Exchange never to return. The same is not true of investments, for them capital and interest must be repaid to the registered holders, while money used in gambling goes to swell the purses of foreign speculators and manipulators."

Both Major Stewart and his wife are well known in the motorcycling world. Mrs. Stewart has taken part in many endurance tests, including a "double twelve" record on the Brooklands track. From Stavanger the party will go to Oslo before returning.

Complete Evacuation Under Way as Result of Fur-Tremors

Wellington, New Zealand.—The complete evacuation of the Murchison district was under way today as the result of renewed earth tremors which have terrorized the populace.

Practically all the inhabitants of the adjoining valleys have fled to Wellington. Most of them fled in such haste that they left behind even what was not destroyed by the 'quakes and had nothing except the clothing they were wearing.

Two severe tremors shook the district Sunday, one of them so powerful that the light at Farewell Cape was extinguished. Previous 'quakes had been felt in the Murchison, Taka and Westport districts on Saturday afternoon.

Sunday School Lesson

July 7. Lesson I—The Story of Ezekiel—Ezekiel 3: 4-11; 24: 15-18. Golden Text—As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live.—Ezekiel 33: 11.

ANALYSIS.

- I. THE PROPHET AND THE PEOPLE TO WHOM HE IS SENT, Chs. 1:1-3; 2:1.
- II. THE WATCHMAN UNDER RESTRAINT, Ch. 3: 16-27.
- III. THE JEALOUSY OF GOD, Ch. 8: 1-4; 11: 22-25.

INTRODUCTION—Ezekiel was a younger contemporary of Jeremiah. Like Jeremiah, he came of a priestly family, but of the so-called "sons of Zadok," who from the time of Solomon had charge of the services of the temple. The family of Jeremiah were country priests (Jer. 1: 1) who seem to have had at all times no direct connection with the temple. When Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, took Jerusalem in B.C. 597, and carried into captivity the king and many of the noblest and richest of the people (2 Kings 24: 11-16), Ezekiel was one of the captives. No doubt he had come, while still at home in Jerusalem, under the influence of the personality and teaching of Jeremiah, and had carried with him to Babylon much that he had learned from that great prophet. His own call came five years later (B.C. 592), and he tells us in chapters 1 to 3 of the impressions, and of the visions which accompanied that experience. His prophetic messages were delivered in Babylon to his fellow exiles, for their instruction and admonition, but some of them seem to have been intended by him to be carried to the people remaining in Jerusalem, chs. 6: 1; 7: 1; 18: 1.

The first half of the book of Ezekiel (chs. 1 to 24) is made up almost entirely of denunciations and warnings, preceding the fall of Jerusalem which took place in B.C. 586. The second half (chs. 25 to 48), in addition to prophecies about foreign nations, contains later messages of comfort and of hope, culminating in a remarkable picture of the city, and the restored temple of the future age.

- I. THE PROPHET AND THE PEOPLE TO WHOM HE IS SENT, Chs. 1:1-3; 2: 1 to 3: 15; 24: 15-24; 33: 30-33.

The first verses of ch. 1 contain two introductory passages, one by the prophet himself (vs. 1 to 4) and the other probably by the hand of an amanuensis (vs. 5 to 7). What is meant by "the thirtieth year" is unknown, but it may have been the thirtieth year of the prophet's life. It was the fifth year of his captivity B.C. 592. The fourth month, according to the Babylonian calendar, began some time in June. Ezekiel was among the captives, that is, in a community of captive Jews, by the river of Chebar, probably the great canal now called Shal-en-Nil, some distance south of Babylon. This southern part of the Babylonian country was the land of the Chaldeans.

The first divine message came to the prophet in the form of visions in which he saw the majesty and glory of God, revealed, and felt the hand of the Lord upon him compelling him to bear them to the people.

In chs. 2 and 3 Ezekiel tells us of his call and commission and, like Isaiah and Jeremiah, something of the obstinate and unrepentant character of the people to whom he had been called. He had fallen upon his face on the ground prostrate before the majesty of God revealed in a vision, ch. 1: 28. Now, while still in the vision, dream, or trance, he is set upon his feet and bidden to go upon his mission to a rebellious nation, "hard-faced and stubborn-hearted." He must speak to such people the words of truth and righteousness given him to God, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear. Moffatt renders v. 6, "Son of man, fear them not, fear not what they say, although they cut and wound you, although they strike and sting you—fear not what they say, dread not their scowls (for they are a rebellious folk)." The message which he is to bear comes to him at a roll of a book, a parchment or papyrus roll, written on both sides. The eating of the roll in the vision symbolizes the reception of the meaning and value of it into his own mind and heart. Though bearing hard words of denunciation and warning, yet the message has in fit the unspiced sweetness of truth. Or, as one writer on this passage (chs. 2: 9 to 3: 3) says, "It is as sweet as honey in his mouth, for it is sweet to do the will of God, and to be trusted with tasks for him. With Ezekiel's experience compare Jer. 1: 7-9, and for the promise of strength and courage, see also Jer. 1, 17, 19.

The prophet's message is for his own people, who speak his own language, whose unwillingness to listen he contrasts with what he believes would be the willingness of strangers. That he may stand firm against their stubborn hardness the Lord will give him strength and enabling steadfastness, ch. 3: 9-11. Their suffering in captivity should have predisposed them to listen, but they seem at first to have been encouraged by false hopes held out to them of a speedy return. (See Jer. 28.)

The vision ends with the experience of being mysteriously lifted up and borne to the Jewish captives at Babel to whom he was to minister. And while he goes there sound in his ears the whirring of the wings of the great beasts, and the noise of the wheels, which bore up the crystal stage and the enthroned majesty of God, ch. 1: 4-28. Overwhelmed with the effect of the vision he remains for seven days speechless and as though stupefied. The story told of the prophet's bewilderment in ch. 24: 10-24, has to do with the final destruction of Jerusalem, both city and temple, in B.C. 586. News came to the exiles that the city was besieged. To Ezekiel it seems to have been known by a divine revelation. His own great sorrow, he is made to feel, is little in comparison with the calamity that threatens his people. He will, therefore, make no outward sign of mourning for his beloved dead. He is to be to the people a sign.

Chapter 33: 30-33 gives evidence of the popularity which the prophet gained after Jerusalem had fallen and his work had thus been proven true. To his later messages of hope and comfort the people listened as to a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice. They listened but still they did not heed.

- II. THE WATCHMAN UNDER RESTRAINT, Ch. 3: 16-27.

Very appropriately in this passage the prophet is compared with the watchman warning the people of the deadly peril of the wicked way. But for a time he is withdrawn from his task because of the hostility of the people. Only in his house, to those who came to him privately, will he speak while under this restraint.

- III. THE JEALOUSY OF GOD, Ch. 8: 1-4; 11: 22-25.

Ezekiel knew the temple well and knew the idolatrous practices which were being carried on there, which he describes in ch. 8 as though seen in a vision, and because of which the majesty of the Lord (chs. 1 and 10) departs from his city and his temple, and abandons them to their enemies, ch. 11: 22, 23.

"A man is sometimes sorry he got the last word if it was 'yes'."

A Will-o-the-Wisp

Winnipeg Tribune (Ind. Cons.): Canadian farmers might as well make up their minds to the fact that whenever trade in any item of agriculture produce reaches a substantial figure there will be a demand for higher protection from the American farmer, and the demand will be answered with drastic action. Desirable as it is, the United States market for farm products is a will-o-the-wisp, and the farmers who have pursued it politically for many years will have to adjust their economic reasoning accordingly.

"I suppose," said the casual acquaintance, the day after the wedding, "it was hard to lose your daughter?" "No," replied the bride's father. "It did seem as if it were going to be hard at one time, but she landed the fellow just as we were beginning to lose all hopes."

"Yes," giggled the bride-to-be, "I accepted John the first time he proposed." "Oh, no, you didn't darling," said her dear friend, "No, you didn't. You weren't there."

THE WEST AND THE EAST

John S. Holpand in the Nineteenth Century (London): It is common to hear reference made in the West to the disillusionment which followed the War, especially in regard to political affairs. However bitter this disillusionment may be, it was probably much greater in the East. Before the War India was immensely interested in many aspects of Western life and had a great belief that the West might bring to her many very valuable benefits. This feeling has now all but disappeared—at any rate amongst the vast majority of nationally minded Indians. Few are now found (apart from a very small body of moderates, headed by Tagore) who are willing to admit that the West has really anything to teach India. On the contrary, the majority are deeply concerned lest India be corrupted beyond repair by the pre-vasive forces of Western civilization. As a great living Indian philosopher has expressed it: "There are men in the East who spend sleepless nights in cursing God because He has allowed these civilization to get into their lands."

Canada and Naval Defence

Toronto Telegram (Ind. Con): The pacifists in the commons are again howling for further cuts in the National Defence estimates. And to pacify the pacifist the minister declares that this young nation spends less per inhabitant for defence than any other nation in the world. And from this distance it looks as if the Minister's statement wasn't anything to boast about. Canada has set up as a nation with embassies at Paris, Washington and Tokio. She insists on the right to make treaties and settle disputes with foreign powers off her own bat. She practically tells the Mother Country to go away, back and sit down, that she is running a household of her own. Like the man who is playing a "bob-tail flush," she is all right as long as she isn't "called." But some time the showdown will come. And when it does, what has Canada got to show? When she shows the smallest defensive expenditures in the world, what a laugh will follow. However, if Canada has filled her hand by drawing in the British Navy that laugh won't be loud. Neither will it contain a trace of mockery.

The moon drifts in the purple sky, A silver boat on shoreless seas,

Beyond the earth's horizon dim,
And farther than the farthest star,
And thither she will drift with him,

They glide on dreaming seas afloat—

Protection

Victoria Colonist (Cons.): The situation created by the new tariffs and the increased tariffs is a serious one for this country, for an adjustment of trade in the handling of new markets to replace those lost on the American side, will take time. Mr. Mackenzie King's policy appears to be one of waiting and seeing, as with Parliament on the eye of procrastination there has been no announcement of any contemplated action. The situation is one calling for action, and unless something is done Canada's trade must suffer by the tariff changes shortly to be put in effect on the American side.

Claims Travel Spreads Disease

People Could Make Selves Immune to Many Diseases Says Medico

The spread of the travel habit in these days of rapid transportation is responsible for the rapid propagation of disease, according to Dr. A. Grant Fleming, director of the Department of Public Health and preventive medicine at McGill University. However, the real problem, said Dr. Fleming, that faces us today, is that we are not using the knowledge that we are not using.

With the invention of the steam engine in 1814, said Dr. Fleming, the problem of communicable diseases was accentuated. Today our transportation methods have truly made one community of most of the world, insofar as the spread of disease is concerned. A traveller might nowadays be exposed to smallpox in encounter, cross Canada and the Atlantic, and develop the rash two weeks later in Europe.

SHOULD USE KNOWLEDGE

Deaths are occurring said the doctor, which can be prevented if we will but make use of the knowledge at our disposal concerning the prevention and control of these diseases. The public themselves because of their ignorance, superstition, carelessness, or indifference, are directly responsible for this appalling state of affairs. They are ignorant of the fact that disease may be prevented, superstitious that it is inevitable, careless in postponing what is necessary to secure protection, and indifferent as to health.

We know, for example, said Dr. Fleming, about how to prevent tuberculosis. Its prevention involves a national scheme which embraces not so much medical, as economic and social conditions.

Smallpox disappears where vaccination is carried out, but when this is neglected, an outbreak is sooner or later inevitable.

This shows that such diseases are preventable, but when it is considered that numerous deaths and cases still occur, it is plain that something further must be done. "The answer in my opinion," said Dr. Fleming, "is public education and by public education I mean placing before the public the truth concerning the communicable diseases. But it must be remembered that the accumulation of knowledge is of no use if that knowledge is not applied.

"When everything possible has been done by organized community effort, through a health department, there remains as much more that the individual must do for himself, or the parent for the child. In general I am opposed to compulsory laws, but we need laws to deal with those who will not be persuaded.

"Comparatively few parents realize the seriousness of measles, which is one of the most fatal diseases for young infants. They take no care to protect their children from infection, not realizing that their fatalistic attitude is unsound.

"People still put car tickets and all sorts of odd things into their mouths; they still fail to wash their hands before meals; they omit to cover their coughs and sneezes; and they expectorate promiscuously. These are items which definitely play an important part—in the spread of the common communicable diseases."

And to pacify the pacifist the minister declares that this young nation spends less per inhabitant for defence than any other nation in the world. The Result of the Triangle

"We have once more been tripped up by the triangle," said Mr. Lloyd George, after the election results were declared. "The Conservative and Labour Parties have each secured one member for every 100,000 votes cast for the Liberal Party."

"Although the full returns are not in, it looks for the moment as if we will hold the balance. That is a very responsible position, and we fully realize it, and you can depend upon it we shall make no unfair use of it."

"We shall certainly not use it in a haggling spirit, but, on the contrary, shall carefully consider what is best that can be done in the interests of the country."

"The King's Government must be carried on, and in the present state of the country it is essential that it should be steady."

"We shall certainly bear that in mind in any course we shall decide upon."

"The significant sentences in this statement," points out the Manchester Guardian, "were that the Liberal Party looks as if it will hold the balance. Then there is the cautious phrase that the Liberals will not use it in a haggling spirit, and, more significant, that the King's Government must be carried on all that it should be steady. Then, most significant of all, the words: 'We shall certainly bear that in mind in any course we shall decide upon.'"

"This is obviously addressed partly to the Conservative Party, but much more to the Labour Party."

Sunburn Meter is Newest Invention

Outstanding Scientific Achievement Announced in New York

New York, June 14.—(A.P.)—Creation of a sunburn meter, an outstanding scientific achievement, was announced last night to the New York Electrical Society by Dr. H. C. Renschler, director of research for the Westinghouse Lamp Company.

The meter uses a photo electric cell to make an automatic written record and measurement of the presence of ultra-violet rays, the invisible wave length of light that causes sunburn.

These same rays possess curative powers, which have come into such lamps, that recently medical authorities have broadcast warnings against overdoing.

So exact are its measurements that Dr. Renschler said:

"If you care to take the time to calibrate your skin sensitively with the dosage meter, you can take the instrument out on the beach and develop a beautiful sunburn now so common to sunbathers."

Manitoba's Natural Resources

Manitoba Free Press (Lib.): (The natural resources of Manitoba have been handed over to the province by the Dominion Government.) The people of Manitoba ought not to permit themselves to be deluded into thinking that, as the result of this settlement, the province is now in funds and the period of financial stringency is past. There is another side to this picture, and there usually is. The province will now have to take over the administration of the lands, fisheries and certain public works which have hitherto been looked after by the Dominion; and taking the figures for the past ten years, the Dominion has paid out annually, for these services, $432,000 more than it has received. As the money provisions of the settlement will not at the best give the province more than $350,000 additional revenue, it will be seen that there will be no immediate material betterment of the province's finances as a result of the settlement, though the possession of the domain ought, at no distant date to give this province greatly enlarged revenues.

Bird's Song at Daybreak

Come, here the brown thrush in the dawning.
In the dawning of the day,
Singing to the rising morning;
Come, hear the brown thrush on the spray.

He stutters, nods, and falls a-trilling,
Then gathers breath as morn grows bright.
And lifting up his head and thrilling
He stands and sings with all his might.

Look as the little music-maker
Trills and trills his silver mirth,
The sunlight bursts on holt and acre
And streams across the great green earth.

Even the father of twins puts on Belts.

The Root of Unemployment

Lancelot Lawton in the Fortnightly Review (London): It was the nineteenth century that filled the earth with people and left its successor to solve the problem of what was to be done with them. Karl Marx's embittered description of this epoch was not at all overdrawn. In reply it is often said that the rapid multiplication of population was a response to the enormous growth of wealth due to industrialization, and that as a consequence the standard of living of the masses was raised. But the facts, impressive though they seem, are inadequate proof of common welfare. Other tests need to be applied, as, for example, whether the standard of living was raised sufficiently to justify the bringing into the world of so many million of people, and whether, if the answer be in the affirmative, it was a standard the permanent enjoyment of which was tolerably secure. Judged by either of these tests, the nineteenth century failed.

Emerald Lake, Yoho Park

Beautiful Emerald Lake, in Yoho National Park, British Columbia, was first visited by Tom Wilson in 1882 while searching for stray pack horses. As far as is known, he was the first white man to visit this lake.

About two hours after eating many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The New Empire

London Times Trade Supplement: Slowly but surely the people are awakening to the real significance of the Empire. Nobody of any importance regards what were once known as "the Colonies" as a drain upon the Mother Country. Nobody suggests that their inhabitants should be taxed for the benefit of Great Britain; nobody wishes to retain their development, and only a few foolish persons would like to interfere with their constitutional liberty of action. The burden of Empire remains, but there is a general desire to share its incidence. We are still far from a satisfactory solution of the problem of distributing the man power and money of the Empire to the best advantage, and still unable to agree on the best means to give priority of access to the Empire's markets, but progress is being made. Voluntary performance is supplementing tariff discrimination, and during the last 12 months the women have begun to organize through the League of Empire Housewives, a movement that will give it much-needed practical application. Decidedly the work goes on, and those who would fain see more rapid progress should derive encouragement from the fact that much greater effort is needed to overcome inertia in the mass than to accelerate its velocity when moving.

DO NOT NEGLECT YOUR LITTLE ONES

At no time of life is delay or neglect more serious than at childhood. The ills of little ones come quickly and unless the mother is prompt in administering treatment a precious little life may be snuffed out almost before the mother realizes the baby is ill. The prudent mother always keeps something in the medicine chest as a safeguard against the sudden illness of her little ones. Thousands of mothers have found, through experience, that there is no other medicine to equal Baby's Own Tablets and that is why they always keep a box of the Tablets on hand—why they always feel safe with the Tablets.

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which by regulating the bowels and stomach banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and promote healthy, natural sleep. Concerning them, Mrs. Inaue Sonia, St. Eugene, Ont., writes—"I have been using Baby's Own Tablets ever since baby was a month old and have found that they reach the spot and do more good than any other medicine I have ever tried. I always keep the Tablets in the house and would advise all other mothers to do so." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"At a cricket match," was the answer.

Summertime and Accidents

In Ontario, according to the latest figures published, there were 269 deaths among males and 44 among females, due to drowning during the year. The age group claiming the highest number among the men and boys was that from 20 to 24 years, having a total of 42 fatalities. The women and girls who lost their lives in this way numbered 10 in the age group 14 to 24, the highest single number as regards age. So far as our boys are concerned, instruction in swimming might well be given at an early age, as Ontario loses her boys by accidental drowning in large numbers beginning in the fifth year of life. It goes without saying, of course, that girls also should be taught to swim at the earliest possible age.

Deaths Due to Automobile Accidents
Our death-rate from accidents in Ontario today is alarmingly high. Automobiles are an important factor in fatal accidents. "Be careful!" is a bit of self-help advice which will help not only yourself but the rest of the world as well.

If you use a motor car—be careful. The driver and his passengers derive just as much protection from his careful driving as do the people he meets on his way.

If you use a bicycle—be careful. There are very dangerous risks to be considered in riding a bicycle; be fair to the motor car and to the pedestrian, but first of all, be fair to yourself.

If you do not use a motor car—be careful. The deaths of children following motor accidents are not always the fault of the driver; they are often due to carelessness on the part of the parents or the children themselves. Old people who are nervous should not cross streets and highways busy with traffic by themselves. The motor car is a blessing of modern progress—reasonable care will do much to prevent it becoming a curse.

How to Preserve Children

(Taken from "Babyhood")

1. Take two or more children of the run-about-are. If they are bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked youngsters so much the better.
 2. Tuck them into bed early—and leave for 12 hours of quiet restful sleep. Windows wide open.
 3. In the morning, dress them lightly and sit at a table in the brightest, cheeriest corner of the breakfast room.
 4. To each child add the following: One small cup of orange juice. One steaming dish of delicious, nut-brown "whole-wheat" cereal. Several slices of crisp whole-wheat toast.
 5. One glass of milk.
 5. Remove the children to a grassy lot. Add a kite, a dog or so and mix thoroughly.
 6. Cover all over with a blue sky and leave in the sun to brown.

Other Countries, Other Customs

Toronto Star (Ind.): (The London Daily News describes in an article how four Canadian Cabinet Ministers were compelled for the sake of appearances to adopt the custom of carrying walking-sticks in London.) To be seen with a walking-stick has a very different significance in Toronto from what it appears to have in London. There, it would seem from the article in the Daily News, the carrying of a stick imparts to you an air of class and caste which impresses a policeman. Here the carrying of a stick suggests that you are, unappreciated, unable to get about in a car of your own. If you walk it is taken to mean that you have neither car, cash nor a friend to pick you up. As for walking, it is thing one does indoors or necessarily and compulsively when fishing or playing golf. Children still learn to do it, but not until long after they have become seasoned and sun-burned motor passengers.

A National Policy

London Free Press (Cons.): It is becoming more and more apparent that it is hopeless to try and do business in the way of reciprocity pacts or trade treaties with the United States. The only possible policy for Canada is that enunciated by Hon. R. B. Bennett, whereby Canada will frame its own fiscal policy for the benefit solely of Canadian industries. This does not mean necessarily high tariffs, but it does mean a tariff based frankly on the protective principle and which takes into consideration the welfare of the people of the Dominion.
